Grant will give Kinark more space

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Kinark Child and Family Services in Haliburton got a boost when MPP Dennis Drainville announced the Ontario government was giving it $90,000 to renovate its offices.

"Kinark plays a pivotal and central role in this areas social services," he said, adding his government is aware of the need for better social service facilities.

The non-profit organization has been providing services to children and their families in Haliburton County since 1984. An addition to the Eastern Avenue building will create four new offices and expand the reception area.

"Careful and delicate work is done here and it needs to be done in privacy," said Drainville. "If it is too cramped, then it is not a good environment for this therapy to take place in."

Kinark Director John Penn agrees. "When we are interviewing families, their behavior changes when they overhear the family in the office next to them."

Soundproofing will be added in the new addition.

The money for the expansion came out of the Ministry of Community and Social Service's capital budget.

"It was give and take in identifying what needs had to be taken care of," said Larry Elliott, COM-SOC's program supervisor in Peterborough.

He met with Kinark in September to discuss what modifications needed to be done to find suitable office space. Three designs were drawn up before the final option was selected.

Penn said the staff had a major role in the design of the new addition which will reflect many of their suggestions.

Fire takes life of Dorset man

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

A fire at Oxtongue Lake claimed the life of a local man Christmas Eve Day.

Robert Frank Moore, 48, was in his workshop when it caught on fire. He did not survive the blaze.

It took the Oxtongue Lake volunteer fire department nine minutes to respond to the afternoon blaze, but the building was already engulfed in flames when they arrived.

"The whole thing was a great big ball of fire," said Deputy Fire Chief Bill Service. "We didn't even know there was anybody in there."

The 11 firemen and two trucks stayed at the scene almost four hours to ensure the fire did not spread.

The OPP in Minden said the cause of the fire is not known but the Fire Marshall is investigating.

STARTING OFF ON THE RIGHT FOOT: The footings were poured for Kinark's addition just before the holidays. On hand to announce the Ministry of Community and Social Services' grant of $90,000 for the construction were, from left: Larry Elliott, COMSOC program supervisor; MPP Dennis Drainville; and Kinark Director John Penn. The present building is over-crowded and it's hoped renovations are completed by spring.

Sander driver injured when truck plunges off steep hill

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The driver of a municipal sander suffered two broken ribs when the truck slid off the Dover Spring Road and tipped over.

At nine in morning on December 22, Kevin Hamilton was making the first run down the steep hill, just before the spring. The road was very icy and the truck started sliding towards the ditch. Hamilton lost control and was injured when the truck went into the ditch and landed on its side, says Dysart's road superintendent, Jim Taylor.

When a truck that size starts sliding, Taylor adds, there's very little that can be done.

Hamilton was taken to Haliburton Hospital and was back on light duty on Monday. Haliburton Truck Centre righted the sander and towed it to the municipal garage. "It looks like it's going to be a write off," says Taylor, because the frame is bent. The truck was carrying nearly a whole load of sand at the time.

This was the season's first accident, but last year there were a couple of similar incidents.

"These fellows are all good drivers and we've got good trucks, but the conditions we have to drive in are pretty hard on the men," Taylor says.

"It's scary. I've had some pretty severe situations. . . It's got to the point now where a lot of our drivers can't drive any more, they've lost their nerve. The life cycle for a driver here is short — it's a tough job."

Most municipal roads are kept snow-covered, with a 95/5 sand/salt mixture used to provide better traction in slippery conditions. Fluctuations in temperatures last month saw some snow-covered roads become as smooth as glass with ice.

Compounding the problem, says Taylor, is the terrain. Specifications for municipal roads are not as stringent as those for highways. For instance, the maximum grade on a highway is five percent; it's 12 per cent for municipal roads. As well, there are a lot more sharp curves and there are more people using the roads.

"It's not easy to run a sander or plow here," Taylor says.

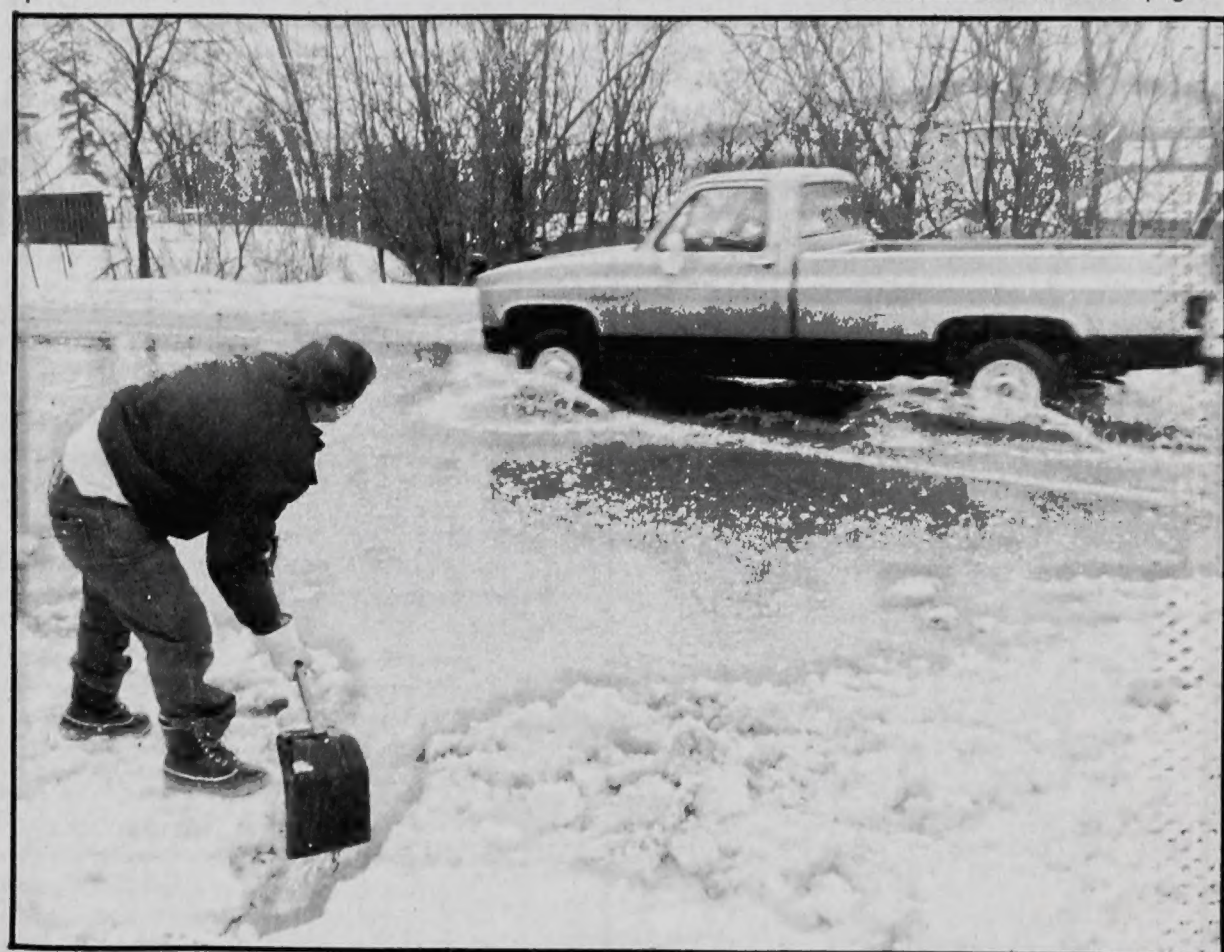

All but the one truck used in the village of Haliburton have chains on the tires for traction. Hamilton was driving the truck without chains.

The county is just below the boundary where studded tires are allowed, Taylor says. Studded tires are good for the drivers but hard on the roads. But "chains do more damage than stud tires" and he'd like the municipality to be able to use stud tires.

Taylor says that visitors to the area also have to take more precautions. Sometimes the department's trucks will be called out because a visitor's car is stuck in the snow. The men arrive to find the car doesn't have winter tires and is trying to haul a trailer with two snowmobiles on it.

"It's treacherous for them."

Wet work

RAIN, RAIN, GO AWAY! And don't come back till spring. Haliburton's roads and streets were pretty messy Saturday morning when rain turned the newly-fallen snow to slush. Here, Miles Maughan of Dysart's roads department clears a catch basin on Highland Street beside the bridge while a passing truck threatens to get him wetter.

Assessment unfair: FOCA

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

A change to market value assessment would inflict an "inappropriate and very unfair system of taxation" on seasonal and permanent county residents, says the executive director of the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations.

"We do not believe that during a recession is the proper time to be introducing such a dramatic shift in the tax burden," says Jerry Strickland, who's also president of the Miskwabi Lake association. "To the extent that a home has appreciated at a greater rate than municipal property values in general, that owner will pay a greater proportion of the total municipal tax bill," Strickland says in a letter to The Echo. "The owner will therefore be subsidizing those whose properties have not appreciated as much. His services will not have changed and his income may not have changed, but nonetheless, he will be expected to pay more than his fair share of municipal taxes."

"This burden applies to both seasonal and permanent residences, the elderly and others who purchased their homes many years ago and may not be able to cope with the substantial tax increases that will occur with reassessment."

"Basing property taxes on 're-assessed (1988) market values' is tantamount to taxing property owners on future unrealized capital gains and in fact, on capital gains that they may never realize during their lifetime."

If market value assessment is implemented, Strickland says there must be "proper caps and controls to offset undue burden on ratepayers."

Because it was the peak year for market values, Strickland says 1988 values should not be used. He prefers 1982. (They are presently at 1978 in many municipalities.)

Other concerns include —the "ability to pay" consideration is ignored

—the uncertainty due to constant reassessment breeds confusion

—effects on equalization factors, grants and education taxes are unknown

Icy canoe ride saves dog from drowning

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

It's not every December that Barry Day decides to go for a canoe ride in the Drag River. But when a dog is drowning, he'll try just about anything to save it.

Maxine wasn't about to question her means of rescue either. After floundering around in the frigid waters for 20 minutes, the Old English Sheep dog would have welcomed a postman, as long as he could get her out.

On the day before Christmas, Day pulled up into the driveway of his Head Lake home, just by Rotary Beach. With him was his boarder, Ryan Griffin. As they were heading indoors, Griffin noticed someone standing on the ice, just by the open water where the river meets the lake. Then he noticed there was a dog in the water.

"I said to Ryan, 'Let's get the canoe,'" Day recalls. The canoe was down by the lake, tipped over and covered with snow. The two men carried it towards the dog.

Instead of venturing onto the thin ice, Day put the canoe into the open river and paddled towards the ice.

By this time, more people had gathered to try to help Maxine, a well-known park visitor. That morning, she and her pup gambled onto the ice and fell through. The pup managed to pull itself onto the ice, but Maxine couldn't. Instead of swimming towards shore, Day says she just kept treading water.

When he reached her, Maxine had gone under a few times and the top of her head was covered in a layer of ice. As he pulled her into the canoe, she was close to death. "The desperation in those eyes!"

Day paddled them to shore where Dick Davies lifted Maxine onto the ground. Caroline Greenfield wrapped Maxine in blankets she had brought down. Buck Baker started to run her home to Bernstein's store but "the poor thing couldn't walk. It just collapsed." Baker ended up driving Maxine home.

"She's fine, thank God," says Betty Grant, who was taking care of Maxine in her son Marty's absence. "They give you grey hairs these dogs."

For a short while, Grant says "we didn't know if she'd make it." After 45 minutes, Maxine started to rally round and Grant says a trip to the vet was unnecessary. Since Maxine's cold swim, Grant says many people have been enquiring about her health.

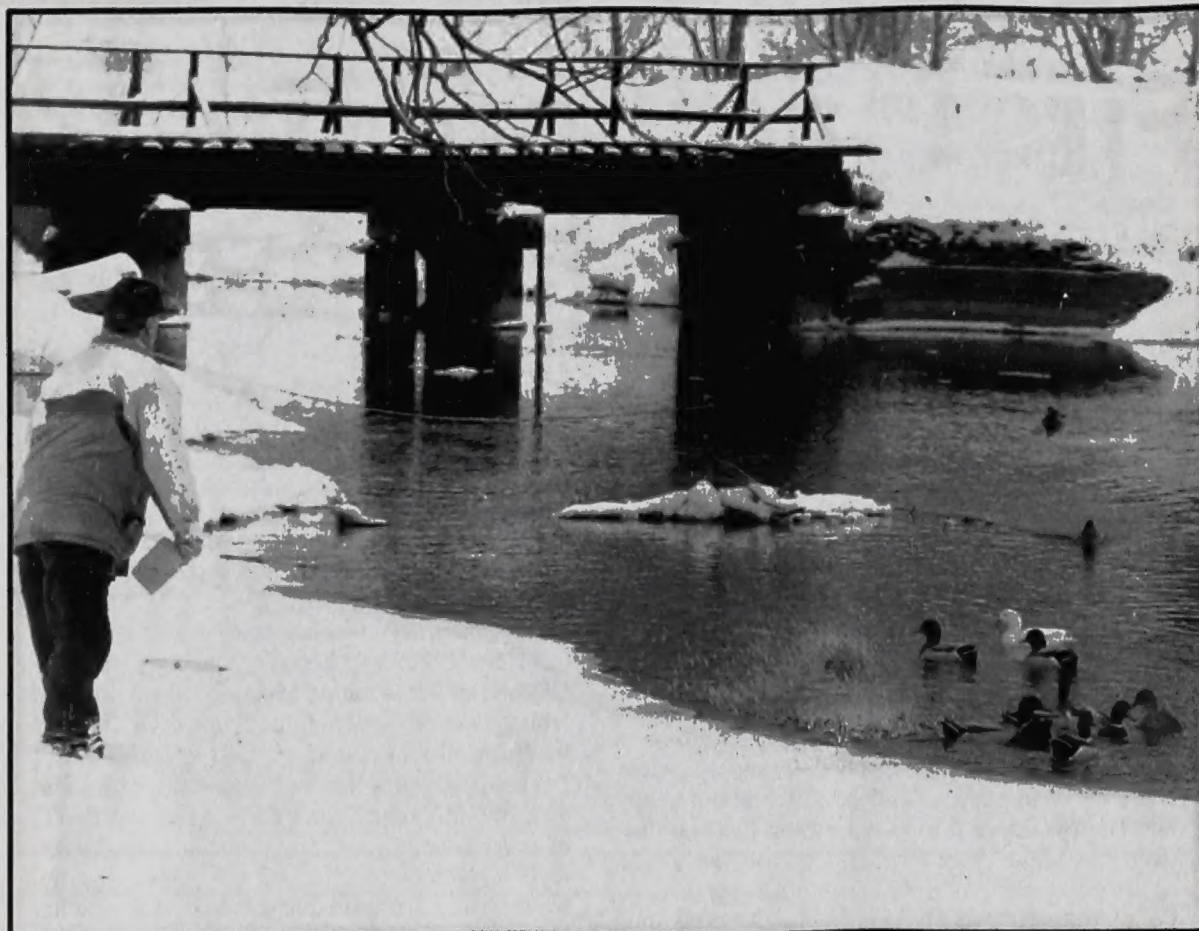

For Day, this was his second wintertime dog rescue. A couple of years ago, he got a call at his Eagle Lake home asking if his husky was there. When Day said yes, the caller said a husky had fallen through the ice and couldn't get out.

Day rushed down to the lake and got into an aluminum boat. He pushed it along the ice until it broke through and used a rope to lasso the dog and pull it into the boat.

At that time, one of the people on shore said "It's just a dog, it's done, just forget about it." Day couldn't disagree more strongly.

"I love animals," he says of the reasons behind his rescue attempts. "I think we've got a responsibility to help them."

But he doesn't think his actions are special. "I would think anyone would do the same."

FOR THE BIRDS: The ducks that live in the Drag River in Haliburton have a true friend in Art Ouellette. He feeds them regularly throughout the winter, at his own expense — 13 40-pound bags of corn so far. If you'd like to help defray costs, contact Mr. Ouellette or drop off your contribution at Frost Insurance in the Stedmans Mall. One bag of corn costs $11. With the corn, the ducks need no other food, especially not junk food, which can kill them.

Task force needed for assessment changes

Strickland suggests forming a county task force which would look into the two different assessment plans and study the implications.

Even if a slim majority of municipalities vote in favour of the assessment changes, Strickland says "all municipalities — even those who reject it — will be forced into acceptance."

Last month, representatives of the Ministry of Revenue presented county council with the results of an impact study which gauged what would happen if market value assessment was implemented. While the total amount of taxes raised would not change, there would be shifts among taxpayers. Some will pay more, especially those who have lakeshore properties because their value has increased dramatically, but others will pay less.

Councillors are being urged to make their decisions soon because interim tax bills are soon to be prepared. If the system is changed half-way through the year, clerk-treasurers would have the difficult task of calculating how much each property owner would have to pay for the second tax bill.

"The fact that interim tax bills are scheduled to be issued in January '91 is a woefully inadequate reason to rush into this venture," says Strickland.

Responding to an Echo editorial which endorsed market value assessment, Strickland says "Is it fair? NO. Will this cost (a municipal councillor his or her) seat? Probably."

Snow plowers sacrifice holidays

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

While hundreds of shouts of "Hurray, it's snowing!" were heard across the county just before Christmas, there were a handful of people muttering "Oh no, there goes my Christmas holidays."

It was a blue Christmas for the dozens of men who drove the snow plows and sanders along the kilometres of the county's snow-covered roads and highways. When the snow started falling December 23, that was the beginning of the end of their holidays.

"We've been out every day," says Jim Taylor, Dysart's road superintendent. A total of 18 men worked nine-hour days every day except Christmas itself. "I even had my mechanic out on a wing (of a plow.)"

The snow caught many of the men by surprise. On Christmas Eve day, as the snow kept falling over the roads, at least two men had to phone their wives to say "You'd better go buy your own Christmas present because I'm going to be working all day."

Other than that, Taylor says "it's a good healthy atmosphere" at the department. "They're treated pretty keen and they put out for me."

He also notes there was not one complaint from drivers either.

"It does keep you from being with your families but that's part of the job," says Glamorgan's road superintendent, Vince Billings. Along with Phillip Billings and Don Cloutier, they were on the roads every day except Christmas.

"You just get used to it," says Cloutier, whose eight-month-old baby isn't old enough to miss her father during the holidays yet. He was supposed to be off for five days so until the snow arrived "it looked good on paper at least."

"They've just come to expect it. If it snows, they're expected to work," Brian Mulholland says of the county roads workers' attitude towards a White Christmas. The 24 men on duty worked Christmas

DEADLINE FOR APPEALING YOUR 1990 PROPERTY ASSESSMENT

Tuesday, January 8th, 1991

The final day for appealing your 1990 property assessment to the Assessment Review Board is Tuesday, January 8th, 1991. Your assessment will be used to calculate your 1991 municipal and school taxes.

This deadline does not apply to the County of Haliburton and the County of Peterborough which are considering a reassessment for the 1991 tax year.

You should appeal your 1990 property assessment (a) if you are dissatisfied with the amount of the assessment, even after discussing it with your Regional Assessment Office; (b) if you appealed your previous assessment and the appeal has not been settled; or (c) if you received a Notice of Property Valuation which does not reflect a settlement of your previous appeal.

The Assessment Review Board is an agency of the Ministry of the Attorney General and operates less formally than a court of law. It is authorized to decide if your property assessment is fair and equitable, compared with similar properties in your area. You may present your own case, retain a lawyer, or ask a friend or relative to act as your agent.

A Notice of Appeal form is available from your municipal office, your Regional Assessment Office, or the Assessment Review Board. You may also use the reverse side of a Notice of Property Valuation or write a letter. Appeals should be forwarded in writing to the Regional Registrar of the Assessment Review Board at the address shown below.

If you have any questions or require assistance in filing the appeal, please contact your Regional Assessment Office. The address and telephone number are in the Blue Pages of your telephone directory, under "Property Assessment Information."

First lady president gets Lions Club's unanimous support

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

IT'S LITTLE SURPRISE that Ev Saxby is this district's first woman president of a Lions Club. Nor is it surprising that Mrs. Saxby thinks there's nothing really special about that.

"It's not that you think you're the only one who can do it," the new president of the Haliburton and District Lions Club says. "You just see the need and know there's something you can do."

"It's like the saying 'If you want something done, you ask someone who's busy,'" says the club's secretary, Ken Noble. When Mrs. Saxby is asked what she feels about being a woman president of a traditionally men's club, Mr. Noble helps out by saying "Ev's too modest to answer. . . I don't think it was her idea."

In June, Mrs. Saxby was nominated to fill the one-year position. No one warned her beforehand and she was honoured when the nomination received unanimous support of the other eight men and one woman members.

"We need the ladies," Mr. Noble says. "I don't think the club would be complete without them."

(As Mrs. Saxby notes, when a man is involved in the Lions Club, chances are his wife is too, even if unofficially. After helping her husband Ted behind the scenes, she decided to become more visibly active. "I thought I could do more by joining the Lions than banging my head against the wall getting a new [Lioness] club started.")

"Our club was on the decline," Mr. Noble adds, and they must work hard to get new members and keep them interested. There is no local Lioness club, so it only makes sense that the women join forces with the men. It was a sad day when the Wilberforce Kinsmen Club had to disband because of lack of membership, and he doesn't the Lions Club to go the same way.

"If I could help and hold the club together, fine, I'd try to help," Mrs. Saxby says of why she accepted the responsibility. "I had no miracle ways to do this, but I had the club behind me."

It's not just the local members who have no qualms over her presidency. Since taking office in September, Mrs. Saxby has had to attend many zone and district meetings and take her place among the men presidents.

"I don't feel any hostility and our governor, Clare Greenfield, came to the first meeting I had and he is very, very helpful," she says. "I know there are a lot of people out there I can call on."

Mrs. Saxby has her work cut out for her. Last year, the small club managed to raise about $4,000 to assist those in need. The club's most recent projects include helping to buy a blood storage unit for the Haliburton Hospital, buying a wheelchair for a woman, and helping to pay the costs of rebuilding Clarence Rowbotham's house on the top of Vinegar Hill, which had been destroyed by fire. (One of the donation jars was stolen, along with cigarettes, when the Wilberforce IGA was broken into.)

Lions International's main projects are helping those who cannot see or hear. It has helped pay for Canada's only training school for seeing eye dogs. Part of the money raised locally supports such initiatives.

"We like to serve where we are needed," Mr. Noble explains. "Where the need is, that's where we are."

"You want to serve in your community and are willing to donate the time to work at it," Mrs. Saxby says of what it takes to be a Lion. "We serve, that's our motto."

She's not a good ticket seller — unlike Lion Ron Barr, who's a master at not letting people leave his Gooderham store before they've bought a ticket — but her quilts are the envy of many. The quilt being raffled off now is the second one she has made and donated to the club. When The Loon's Nest, the Haliburton restaurant which was the club's meeting place, closed just before Christmas, she hosted the Christmas party at her home near Tory Hill.

Other fundraising events include selling trees and poinsettias at Christmas, and chocolate bunnies at Easter, not to mention the numerous draws and raffles.

Because Lions member donate much of their

'We need the ladies. I don't think the club would be complete without them,' says Haliburton and District Lions Club secretary Ken Noble. The recent election of Ev Saxby, foreground, to the position of president proves he is not alone in valuing the contribution women make to the organization time and materials to projects — the license fee, for instance, is the only cost of February's quilt raffle — administration costs are kept to a minimum.

"If you make a phone call, you pay for it; if you drive your vehicle, you pay for the gas," says Mrs. Saxby. "Everything we take in goes back into the community."

Membership dues are $55, and Mr. Noble says he spends about $100 a year on top of that just by being involved. But he doesn't begrudge one cent. "You've got to decide before you become a Lion to do these things."

Of course, being a Lion isn't all work. There's also a social side of the club, and there's a strong camaraderie which develops when people work together for the benefit of others. Being a Lion can be a lot of fun, as the laughter of Mr. Noble and Mrs. Saxby attests to. (They both chuckle over the club's Christmas gift to Mr. Noble, who's also involved in other activities: It was a cup which read "Oh Lord, not another meeting!")

The club now includes Mrs. Saxby, Mr. Noble, Treasurer Percy Morrison, Paul Espie, Grant Crofts, Ted Saxby, Joan Lyon, Ronald Barr, Merv Rivers and Roy Nicholls. Thelma Lee will soon be sworn in. They meet the second and fourth Thursday every month, although they have yet to find a new meeting place. New members are always welcome. If you want to serve your community, Mrs. Saxby invites you to contact her at 448-2493.

Local man toughs out rough RCMP training

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

BEING AT HOME for the holidays gives most university and college students the much needed chance to catch their breath after three long months of school.

For David Chambers of Haliburton, Christmas vacation means more than just a time for rest; it marks a turning point.

As of Christmas Eve, the 23-year-old has successfully made it halfway through his RCMP training.

"Almost all my Christmas gifts had RCMP written on them somewhere," he jokes.

But he does not resent being on the receiving end of his family's humor and accepts it as an indication of how proud they are that he has managed to make it this far.

"There hasn't been a day when I didn't want to quit," he says, relaxing in the rec-room of his family's Haliburton home.

"They play games with you, it's quite an ordeal."

Chambers began his six week "ordeal" on September 24th at the RCMP's training camp near Regina, Saskatchewan. Joining the force was something he has always wanted to do since he was a youngster.

However, after he graduated from high school he planned on a career as a graphic artist and studied at Georgian College. After graduating, his plans changed.

"I just lost interest. I couldn't see myself sitting behind a desk. I wanted excitement. Now I think I have too much," he jokes.

He is referring to the gruelling training which every RCMP cadet must go through.

"Sleep is a valuable commodity which we all crave the most. Eighteen hour days are not unusual and are almost normal."

Chambers' day begins at 5 a.m. when his troop is called to parade in full uniform. Before leav-

'It's their job to try to make you quit,' David Chambers says of RCMP training camp. 'Sleep is a valuable commodity which we all crave the most. Eighteen hour days are not unusual, and are almost normal' ing the barracks, their bunks must be left wrinkle free. Chambers says often the men use irons to get out the harder creases.

If during one of many inspections your "kit", which consists of your uniform, is not up to standard, there will be repercussions.

Depending on how serious the offence, you might have to participate in the "Bozo Parade". Chambers recalls one such "parade" when some lint from a door frame drifted onto the hat of a fellow cadet.

The corporal made the fellow run around the yard with his hands in the air and yell "I am the Bozo". The man was also bilingual and was made to run twice, the second time yelling in French.

Another punishment could be an invitation to have "tea" with the sergeant major. "This means he yells at you and could end up taking your weekend away and confine you to barracks." After weeks of hard work, this could be a rough punishment.

However, punishments pale in comparison when they are weighed against the training exercises which every man and woman must go through.

Chambers mentions the expression "A Fun Run". This consists of a jog in which the troop must run in unison and then at certain spots do what the corporal asks of them. This could mean anything from push-ups to sit-ups, to crawling on your elbows for a few hundred yards.

Degrading and vicious as this sounds, Chambers says it plays an important part of the training.

"It's their job to try and make you quit. Sometimes they lay into certain people and many people quit."

In his troop of 27 men and 5 women, none have left. But there have been occasions when Chambers has contemplated it, especially during "self-defence" training which he says has been nicknamed "self-destruct" training.

"We call it that because most people get hurt."

Part of this training involves hand to hand combat which Chambers says has no rules. "We are trained to never let a person on top of us. So to get them off we may have to bite, scratch, knee them, whatever it takes."

He despite how brutal this may sound, it is necessary because in an hostile situation, there will be no rules used.

Learning to fight this way is foreign to most of us, he says, and the RCMP does everything it can to re-route their way of thought.

"They teach us hard to try and get that out of our systems."

In fact, every aspect of training the RCMP dishes out pushes their officers to the same conclusion.

"They make us work as a team, that's how the RCMP works." That's aided by the bond that develops between recruits. "We are just like brothers," he says of his fellow troop members.

But making it through the first half of the course is the important part and when Chambers graduates March 21st, he could end up anywhere in Canada.

His first choice would be lower British Columbia on the mainland because he says it reminds him of Haliburton, but it won't be up to him to decide.

"I don't think I could live on the Prairies, it's too flat."

In the meantime, he is busy preparing himself for the next leg of his training which he is confident will go much better. "Once you're half way through you're treated like human beings and you start to have a bit more fun."

However, can he honestly say the experience has all been worth it? You better believe it.

"I see this as a stepping stone to some major opportunities," he says. "I know this will open a lot of doors for me."

There's no life like it in Persian Gulf

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

FRANK BIRD SMILES and says — again — “I’m afraid I can’t comment on that.”

But what I like for someone who grew up in Haliburton to journey to Saudi Arabia to take part in what might become war?

“I’m afraid I can’t comment on that.”

Will Saudi society change because of the infusion of North American soldiers, both male and female? And how many women were in his troop anyway?

“I’m afraid I can’t comment on that.”

But, but, but...

“All I can say,” he concedes, “is that it was very hot, I got bored, I rode on lots of camels, I swam in the Gulf, I haggled with locals for goods and they are very nice people.”

Actually, 24-year-old field engineer Corporal Bird can, and does, say a lot more about his recent tour of duty in the Persian Gulf with the Canadian army. Yet for the most part, he has to speak in generalities, not specifics.

If you want specifics, you have to read journalists’ accounts in newspapers or watch television. He’s not allowed to give as many details about what’s happening in the Gulf. After all, he wasn’t there on vacation.

Right now, however, Bird is home in Haliburton for the holidays. He and his wife Julie left the Canadian Forces base in Lahr, Germany (it seems odd not to say West Germany anymore) a few weeks ago. Their first stop was Quebec to visit with Mrs. Bird’s family for Christmas. On Boxing Day, they were greeted at Pearson International by Frank’s mother Gloria, who managed to keep her tears of happiness to a minimum. “I cried all the way down in the car,” she explains.

Homecomings are always special but the joy of seeing each other once again was intensified because of the strain of the last few months. For the two Mrs. Birds, having a husband/son in the midst of a tense war zone was not an experience they’d like to repeat.

“I was just so distraught, I still am,” says Gloria Bird as she chops vegetables in the kitchen of her Harburn Road home. “Times seem so good yet over there it’s so bad. Right now I’m so elated. It’s wonderful having both him and Julie home.

I just thank God he’s home.”

Haliburton was home to Frank Bird until a year after he finished high school in 1984. The army seemed an attractive alternative to an 19-year-old boy who wasn’t ready to settle down in one place.

“It’s a job,” he says plainly, before he gets to the other side of army life. “It’s exciting, it’s an adventure. I’ve done things my peers have never done or will do. I don’t like staying in one place very long. It’s just the way I am. Maybe if I hadn’t joined the army I wouldn’t have felt the same way. But once it starts, I just love to travel.”

What’s that they say in the commercials — “There’s no life like it”? “Exactly,” says Bird.

Training took him to Chilliwack, British Columbia. As a field engineer, “our task is to deny mobility to the enemy and provide mobility to the friendly. We’re the builders. We build bridges, roads and camps and we destroy bridges, roads and camps.”

Just up the road, county roads crews are building an extension to the Harburn Road. “Maybe the job is similar in what we do but it’s different in why we do it. We build a road to blow it up a week later for training.”

After nine months in B.C., he was sent to Valcartier, Quebec, which is 15 minutes outside Quebec City. There he met Julie, who was working for a printer who had a contract with National Defense.

“I met Julie two months before I left for Germany,” Bird says, once again smiling. “We corresponded for two years. She’d come over to visit me and I’d go to Quebec to visit her. We decided flying back and forth was too expensive so we married.”

“This is for the newspaper,” Julie Bird laughingly admonishes her husband of a year and a half. “You could have said you couldn’t live without me.”

The couple’s home at the Lahr base is just like a self-contained Canadian town. “It’s a very active life, with all types of activities and family support. It’s far better than a civilian community because you have so much access to things. It’s one of the greatest sports-oriented places to live.”

Vacations are another perk, not because they’re longer, but because of the opportunities to travel. The Birds have visited Greece, Egypt, Israel and Turkey, to name but a few destinations.

‘I just thank God he’s home,’ Gloria Bird says as she gives her son Frank a joyful hug. The weeks he was stationed in Saudi Arabia were anxious ones for everyone

‘You never really get a true sense of war,’ says Frank Bird, home for the holidays with his wife Julie. ‘Even when you’re there you feel it’s too far, far away’

It’s when he’s asked what the Canadians do in Lahr that Bird first says “I’m limited as to what I can say.” Canadians are there in support of NATO, how’s that?

The Birds were in Germany at a time of great change and turmoil. Not all Germans were keen on unification, especially as the influx of East Germans was causing havoc with the economy.

“I think I was shipping out to the Gulf the day the two Germanys united. There was a lot of celebration but there was also a lot of unsettlement.”

“The only difference was that we saw a lot of East German cars,” says Julie Bird.

As the Gulf crisis heated up, everyone on base had an inkling of what would be expected of them long before any formal notification. “We were put through weeks of briefings and desert training before we knew we were going. Once Canada lent its support with the navy, it was only a matter of time before the air force would be needed.”

When asked to describe their emotions when Bird heard word he’d be going to the Gulf, the three Birds’ answers tell a lot about their different personalities.

“I was excited,” says Corporal Bird.

“I was worried,” says his wife, casting an anxious glance at her husband.

“I was a basket case,” laughs his mother.

“It’s not like when he leaves and goes on a course for seven months,” says Julie Bird. “It was real stuff. You never knew what would happen.”

“I think it was worse for the kids (on the base),” she adds. The women banded together, providing moral support, and the army had periodic briefings.

Unlike World War II, the stress of being parted was somewhat alleviated by the constant stream of letters and videos. The wives would stand in front of the camera, smile and talk to their husbands, who would see the video hundreds of kilometres away in the midst of the desert.

“You’d be surprised at what that does for people’s morale,” says Bird of the men’s reactions to the words and images from home. “To see your families happy, it gives you a feeling of security.”

When Bird arrived in Qatar, Saudi Arabia, the temperature was 45 degrees. “It was hot,” is the understatement of the year. “You drink lots of water and keep covered (to prevent sunburn.) But that was the tail end of the hot spell. After that, the temperatures were in the mid-thirties, and then mid-twenties.”

Don’t bother asking just what Bird did while he was in Qatar. “I’m very limited in describing any activities. . .”

Instead, he’s asked about some of the reports received back in Canada. In one Globe and Mail article, a soldier was angry he was being sent to the Gulf. “I didn’t join the army to go to war,” he says.

Bird’s smile tells you he’s met Canadian soldiers like that, but his words tell you that soldier was not typical.

“Moral is very, very high down there,” he says. “With the people I was with, we were well prepared psychologically and physically. We knew our job so if that balloon goes up, we’re ready.”

“There’s no prevalent feeling of fear or questioning. If there was, it was well contained.”

“It just boils down to ‘Do you like Haliburton? Do you like Ontario? Do you like Canada as a whole?’ I think we’re a country that has a lot of pride. A proud Canadian is a proud Canadian. When I’m abroad and meet Canadians, they make it known they’re Canadian.”

He has no qualms about being asked to leave the security of Lahr for the dangers of the Gulf. “Canadian taxpayers pay for us so it’s time to return what’s been given to us.”

Yet even though he was in the midst of a very tense situation, it’s almost as difficult for him as it is for Canadians at home who follow the news accounts to get a grasp on what’s happening.

“You never really get a true sense of war,” he says. “Even when you’re there, you feel it’s too far, far away.”

Bird’s tour of duty ended on November 15 and he flew back to Germany. When asked if there’s any possibility he may have to return to Saudi Arabia, Bird lifts up his hands and uses his fingers to make his own quotation marks. “Not at this point.”

That suits his mother just fine. The strain of the past few months has been hard on her. At first she fed on every word in television reports. Then because she was dwelling on it so much, she had to wean herself away and concentrate on her job at the Red Cross Homemakers office. Christmas provided a welcome excuse to busy herself with preparations.

Christmas 1990 is indeed a time for family at the Bird house. That’s one thing being so close to war does for you: it makes you value all the more those times of peace and love.

EDITORIALS

Looking back

Since Charles Dickens wrote A Tale of Two Cities, how many writers have been tempted to step back and reflect upon the year—that was with the words "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times. . ."? While everyone rejoiced as the Cold War gave its last sneeze, anxious eyes turned to the Persian Gulf. As Europe tries to forge a new identity to herald the dawn of a new century, we seem stuck back in 1867, trying to answer the same question we asked then: What is Canada? We live in a time of untold material wealth, yet there are Canadian children who aren't getting enough to eat, adults who can't get work, and dissatisfied consumers who just can't seem to get enough, period. The more we've got, the more we want, the more we complain when we don't get it.

Closer to home, the Highlands are still as beautiful as they've always been. The lakes continue to beckon, winter, spring, summer and fall; the quiet stillness of the forest calms our souls; the sense of community remains. Yet there is also disquiet and malaise. People have lost their confidence in the future — and in the ability of the Highlands to attract the visitors so vital to the economy. Now more than ever, there seems to be little to fall back on if tourism fails. Martin Lumber was once the pride of the county, a source of employment and the lifeblood of many eastern communities who relied on lumbermen's paycheques to keep the stores busy. The mill has been finally been bought, but the area will never be the same again. In an eerie testament to the company's demise, the new office building stands barren and forlorn in the middle of an empty field.

Unemployment is on the rise in nearly every other sector of the local economy, too. Last summer, contractors were screaming because they couldn't find enough skilled help. Now the carpenters, brick layers and electricians are being laid off early in the season. No one is building and those skills are being lost, along with a great deal of self-esteem and pride. It's of little comfort to the people without jobs, and there are many of them, to say the recession won't last long. Their fears and concerns are real and legitimate, and we must be sensitive to them.

Tourism operators, whose clients are already besieged by a full gamut of taxes, now have to face the Goods and Services Tax which will add a further seven per cent to bills. The weather isn't co-operating either. Who needs rain in winter? And what if pollution and our wasteful habits — the dreaded "greenhouse effect" — are to blame for the shifts in temperatures? No government initiatives will provide quick answers to that one.

Businesses large and small are going to suffer with the GST. We have few manufacturers here who will benefit from getting rid of the 12 per cent federal tax, and consumers aren't optimistic its loss will be passed onto them. Not only are we being taxed for things which have never been taxed before, but implementing the tax is an organizational nightmare for many businesses, The Echo included. Penny by penny, the government seems intent on emptying our pockets; perhaps taxes are what pennies are for.

Yet at the same time, Canadians seem to be wallowing in our despair. Instead of doing anything about the state of the economy, we let ourselves get caught up in the sour mood. We complain, we get depressed, we get angry at people who have no control over the situation. Be prepared for our own brand of ethnic turmoil as we search for scapegoats and someone to take the brunt of our anger and fears.

This should be the time to dig in, to force ourselves to be more creative. The recession isn't worldwide, goods and services are still being purchased, we have a talented labour pool, and people will still need a break from all their troubles. After having it relatively easy for so long, has our inventiveness been lost? Here we all were complaining we were too busy; now we have the time to think about where we want the future to take us. Before development starts again, and prosperity turns our heads around, let's find the answer to at least a small part of the Canadian question: What does Haliburton mean to us? M.P.

A smile goes a long way

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

Haliburton is like every place else. It is feeling the pinch of the times.

I believe Harvey Clarke has hit on the answer. Demand that all visitors to downtown Haliburton bring along their personal portable potty.

Martha Perkins feels that "smiles are not for sale." This is only partially true. The spectacle of a row of "caught short" tourists parked on their portables along the main street of Haliburton should indeed cost somebody a smile. Low sidewalk parking meters should be installed which demand payment on job completion. Instant cash, what an asset.

Seriously, a few years ago my husband and I visited Hawaii and two of its neighboring islands. Curiously enough we remember the people of Oahu more clearly than all the wonderful sights we viewed. They smiled freely a shower of warmth, caring and pride in making their visitors welcome. Their smiles sold us!

South West England is a land of golden beaches, towering, rugged cliffs and glowing flowers. The trees are gnarled and thick with age and their beauty adds a serenity to the landscape of bobbing, fishing fleets and old age charm. True to the "old fashioned" principles of serving the customer, the storekeeper greets everyone with a "Good morning" etc. and a smile. The tourist is thanked by that smile and greeting for entering that store. This special extra rarely occurs in the city. In Paris, London, Toronto, etc. we expect courtesy. If we don't receive it, we show our feelings by going elsewhere.

Successful tourist centres know that the competition for visitors is fierce. Beauty is in the eye of the beholder and therefore scenery is not enough. Friendliness, warmth and smiles are the fuel that makes the tourist return. What a small price to pay!

Mary Martin,
Lake Kashagawigamog.

To the Editor:

Thank you for announcing the "Blue Christmas" service for people who feel out of place in this joyous season.

I would like to give credit where credit is due, however. The service is not my idea. It was, and I assume still is offered by First United Church in Kelowna, B.C. The Revs. Glen and Patricia Baker had kindly offered the service for the use of any church congregation by publishing it in our Church School Curriculum, "The Whole People of God."

If anyone wants to use this service, please feel free to contact me and I'd be more than happy to share a copy.

The best of the season to you and yours,

Ed Moll,
Minden United Church.

FEIR PLAY

CREIGHTON FEIR

IT WAS ON Monday night at midnight that we ushered in the brand new year of 1991. This was also the evening that we took time out to sit down and make out that traditional list of New Year's resolutions. We all know what they say about resolutions — they are made to be broken. Yes it's that time of the year to make those promises only to find a year later, that very few of those resolutions were kept. Will this year be any different? Let's hope that this new year will be the time that we can at least keep one of those resolutions that we like to make. Some of the things that will be on the top of the list of New Year's resolutions are as follows: Many of you will be giving it one more shot in an effort to quit smoking. Let me tell you from my own experience that you won't be able to do it unless you have made up your mind that enough is enough and you want to quit the habit. It has been quite a number of years since I smoked my last cigarette, but before this I must have quit on 100 occasions before I finally quit in the only way I knew how and that was cold turkey. Others have told me that it's just about time that they quit drinking as it is ruining their lives and their health. There is help just around the corner for those who are drinking too much. There are two things you can do. Pray about it and get in touch with the local chapter of Alcoholics Anonymous. It's really all up to you. It's very hard for anyone to help unless that person with the problem has made up his or her mind that they want to quit drinking, and only then can they be helped. This is also the time of the year when we jump on the scales and get the results, and tell ourselves that it's time to stop eating so much and get on a diet. Yes it's time to start thinking of getting rid of those unwanted pounds of fat that we have been carrying around as extra baggage. Exercising will also be high on the resolution list and we will keep telling ourselves that it's time to get out and start walking, jogging, skating, skiing or what have you in an attempt to get back into shape. Even if you can only accomplish one of the above it will be just like a dream come true. Good luck to each and everyone of you.

The Victoria-Haliburton Lung Association up to this time have noticed a slow-down in donations. They are slightly down from last year. If you have not already sent in your donation please do so to-day. The goal for the Christmas Seal Campaign in Victoria-Haliburton Counties is $40,000. Many people have responded to this appeal and over $30,000. has come in. The Association is concerned that the goal may not be met. Let's keep in mind the fact that every twenty minutes a Canadian dies from some form of lung disease.

I just received word that the white swan has returned to it's home on the river at Grass Lake, West Guilford.

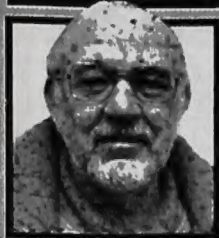

The new year of 1991 was ushered into Haliburton County on Monday evening with dances, special dinners and house parties. With the traditional singing of Auld Lang Syne at midnight everyone's thoughts turned to the brand new year and what they hope they can look for in the upcoming 365 days that lie ahead. Many of our readers will take this time to look back over the past year and reflect on just what happened in their lives and in the world around them. They will also be looking into the future hoping that some of their dreams will finally come true. As we drift into this new year our dreams for the future are anything but bright as we are already into a recession, the GST is staring us in the face and the threat of war still looms very high in the Persian Gulf. The next six months won't be easy for any of us and all we can do is to hope and pray that we will be out of this recession before another Christmas season rolls around.

Here, there and everywhere . . . Sir Sam's Ski Area at Eagle Lake was a hive of activity over the holidays and they tell me that every day hundreds of people were on hand to ski on the slopes . . . May we remind you once again to keep those outside Christmas tree lights up so that you can turn them back on during the Haliburton Winter Carnival in February . . . Many local people had a Merry Christmas thanks to the hard working members of the 4C's and the local churches . . . When comic actor John Candy is in New York he makes his first stop at Madison Square Gardens to visit his old friend Bernie Nicholls . . . And in closing this week I just want to say to all my friends a very Happy New Year.

POINTS OF VIEW

Nurses are the unsung heroes

AS OTHERS SEE IT

BOB GIULIANO

I FIGURE THAT IF I had a chance to start my career all over again, I'd study to become a nurse. We make a lot of the Mother Therasas of Calcutta of this world, as we should, but every day thousands of women and (now more) men perform those acts of great care and helpfulness that ease a sick person's body and mind.

Oh, I know surgeons and other doctors perform the wise and skillful heroics of healing, but it is that nurse who can see with a glance the body's needs and respond day in and day out with the stuff that counts toward getting well.

The nurse is the patient's body. He or she is there to ease the pain, dress the wound, wipe up your vomit or clean the soiled sheets with only a word of kind understanding. They fly around, understaffed, doing ten people's work. They check the fever, pulse — all the vital signs of growing health or deteriorating condition. They lift, twist, turn your body in the bed to find you more comfort. They pull out tubes and hoses, change dressings and are interested in what you leave in the pan as well as what you manage to eat.

Rushed yet ready to listen, they answer the questions that keep you awake and they encourage you to fight for life against what seem like mountainous odds. They waken you in the night to ask if you are sleeping or they stick you with needles to ease pain. But they do the hard, dirty and often thankless business of befriending your body while still leaving you with dignity and self-control.

Some nurses get to know you. Share some stories. Like you to call them by name. Each nurse brings their own special talents and personality and risks, feeling along with the patient toward recovery and wholeness again. They wave you goodbye with a smile while going to attack the powers of death in the next room, having subdued the darkness in yours.

I watched these saints for two solid weeks as the days blustered with winter. In all of their careful giving of themselves to the sick, in the relentless discipline of keeping notes on every act performed, and while responding to patient's cries, doctor's orders, and anxious visitor's questions, they also began to celebrate Christmas!

Somehow a tree was brought into the nursing station. Gradually it became decorated and lit with all the signs of warm hope that surely motivated their lives. Christmas ornaments appeared on each patient's door and signs of sparkling Christmas cheer began to surround their hustling from bedside to bedside. Even a note about their own gift-exchange got stuck up on the chart-board.

Voices around the desk seemed cheerier and not so hushed, but files and reports and notes kept pace with demand, medications kept getting to needy patients and all the while Christmas quietly appeared! It was a miracle of Christmas to see it all happen together, quietly revealing to us the love and hope that has entered human hearts. These nurses were already a sign of God's visiting angels but their celebration of Christmas spoke the word life to patients as to numb shepherds.

A different 'green' Christmas

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

MARTHA PERKINS

NOTWITHSTANDING THE VERY large green garbage bag filled with torn wrapping paper and discarded boxes, this was an environmentally friendly and politically correct Christmas.

There were gifts made in Third World countries with recycled steel barrels. For the most part there were gender-neutral, non-violent, non-sexist gifts for the children. Some presents were wrapped in newspapers. My brother and his girlfriend tie-dyed bags they had sewn to use instead of wrapping paper. My sister sewed bags and, for the adults, in each one was a sandwich container, a lug-a-mug mug to use instead of styrofoam cups, and instructions for a litterless lunch.

Her best idea, however, was recycling toys. Just as girls are growing out of some of their toys such as my brother's sons are growing into them. I watched as my two-year-old nephew opened his brightly-coloured cloth bag and discovered the work bench. As he hammered the blue plastic nails into the wooden holes, he didn't notice, and didn't care, that the gift was second hand. Children don't have that sort of value system yet.

It all made sense, and complemented our growing awareness that we can't have our cake and eat it too if we want the cake to be around for the next generations. But it also reminded me of one of my goals for the new year.

The gifts, and the way they were wrapped, managed to get a message across without bludgeoning people over the head with sanctimonious lectures. I'm hoping to achieve the same result with my writing.

Columns and editorials are the most difficult things to write because you want to get your message across without preaching. Self-righteous indignation only turns people away or appeals to the already-converted. The more strongly you feel about something, the more entrenched your position becomes. Statements come across sounding like eternal truths.

Instead, I wish I could write like Aesop. He told you a nice, entertaining story and at the end, with a little prodding of course, he let you boil it all down into one simple message. This way, he encouraged active participation: readers have to think, too, and are not expected to just absorb the messages without contributing any thoughts of their own. If you learn something, the pleasure was all yours.

Journalists, I think, are primarily story tellers. They have to give you a beginning, middle and end, even though the end is usually told first. Not many people today read a newspaper just because it's "good for them." There are too many other things they can do with their time and newspapers have to be able to compete for their attention.

So if one day in the new year you happen to turn to the editorial page and find a story waiting for you, don't be surprised. But at this stage, don't expect it to happen very often either.

A Happiest of New Years to all.

It's time for resolutions

NORTHERN LIGHTS

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

D ID YOU GET what you wanted for Christmas? It was a very nice holiday at Tonarosa Farms. The weather suited us, and we actually got all the kids together for a few hours two days in a row. Not an easy task anymore.

I've never quite come to terms with Boxing Day. (We don't do that in the States.) Battling a crowd of bargain hunters for next year's wrapping paper is not my idea of how to recover from three days of non-stop food and festivities. I'd rather stand outside and listen to the falling snowflakes in between napping and gnawing on my turkey wing. Maybe in a day or so, we'll put the boxes that the gifts came in back in storage for another year.

Now, we all start counting down to the New Year's Eve party. The one last evening of squeezing into an outfit that wasn't made to accommodate all the 'figgy pudding.' And while you wrestle with the waistline, you resolve to walk and fast till you can button and zip everything you own without all that grunting and panting.

Yup! It's resolution time again. And consciously or not, we're all sure we're going to do something to improve our life style.

C.H.A.N.G.E. has resolved to put more action behind all our nagging. We are hereby issuing a challenge to the Chamber of Commerce and the tourist industry to make the Haliburton Highlands the most environmentally friendly tourist attraction in Canada. So where do we start? We're challenging the innkeepers and lodge owners. Which of you has the foresight and courage to be the first to go 'green'? If any innkeepers out there are willing to make the effort, C.H.A.N.G.E. will form a team to help you organize your waste management. We know it's a scary prospect. But it's really not as difficult as it first seems. Once you've made up your mind to do it, the hardest part is just to begin new habits, and work out a system that allows you to 'ecologize' and still remain cost effective. We think at some point, you would be pleasantly surprised to see a small financial gain.

The thing is, an enormous amount of garbage is produced by the tourist trade. Not only by the establishments, but by the visitors as well. The food waste alone is tremendous. Sam, our cham-

Lord Willingdon, Governor-General of Canada, paid a visit to Haliburton in 1930. He arrived by special train and a parade of school children led by the Haliburton Citizens Band, proceeded to the Recreation Grounds where a reception was held. People from all parts of the County gathered in front of the platform to greet the Governor-General who is just about to step off the train. An update from On the Road

WHAT WITH OUR traditional look back at the year past, and then a look at future trends, readers who expected to hear more from 'on the road' must be wondering if we still are.

I gather some people were expecting more of a travelogue than they've been seeing, what with reports bogging down a bit after the McDonald's Museum visit. I did report the problems of trying to reach old friends in cities such as Des Moines, Denver and Salt Lake City, and while we were pretty much on the move for the first while, we did spend a few days in the Salt Lake area.

The Lake itself is a fascinating one-of-a-kind kind of place, so much so that we ended up buying a videotape that explains its history in terms of its early formation, a man's arrival and involvement — including a monstrous dance hall that featured two big bands at once. It also gives you views of the scenery impossible to photograph. Postcard of the future I guess.

Brian Hunter and his railway club buddies would have enjoyed the afternoon we spent on the Heber Creeper, an 1880s railway line that runs through Provo Canyon. It got the creeper name in the old days because it took so long to climb the grades through the foothills, and the trip was both fun and sad.

It was getting lots of TV news coverage because it was expected to be the last trip for the line after over 100 years. Seems the state decided to tax the owner for the use of the line he's been keeping up on his own for the past 20 years — and are more interested in the bucks than the tourist trade it brings to the area.

Downtown Salt Lake City is, of course, the focal point of the Mormon religion, and we took the tour, cutting out just before the sales pitch, and turning down the free Book of Mormon offered. We only heard the Choir on tape in the famous Tabernacle, but we did stick around for an excellent live recital on their ancient and enormous pipe organ. (And, believe it or not, there's a McDonald's right across the road!)

We renewed our interest in the Oregon Trail in Idaho, where we camped at Glenn's Ferry, overlooking Three Islands Crossing, where so many wagon trains on their way west crossed the Snake River, first by ford, then by ferry. They say you can still see the wagon ruts in the rocks across from the campground.

From there we travelled north to follow the mighty Columbia River out to Portland, with a stop at the Bonneville Lock and Dam to watch the salmon climb the fish ladder. While we were in the area, we drove over to see the Mount St. Helen's Volcanic Park, but the fog was too bad to see anything much.

We stayed in Salem, which had been our target destination, for several days and visited with cousins of my grandfather on my mother's side. My Aunt Vera has done some amazing work and travelling to create a family history and I even got addresses for some long-lost cousins I grew up with who now live in Brantford (Ontario, that is).

I guess that's where the tempo changed. We fell in love with the Oregon coast where they have many fully-equipped State Parks within the sound of the Pacific Ocean. Lunches in the sand dunes

SHARON LYNCH

"NOW DON'T YOU BOYS be too late," his mother called. "Supper's at 5:00." Mike shouted back agreement as he and Paul started out across the back field.

"It'll probably be leftover turkey again," muttered Mike. "Are you sure you want to stay for that?" he asked his friend.

"I'll just have the same at my house," came Paul's reply. "Besides, my aunt from Lindsay is staying for a few days and I need a break from all those hugs and wet kisses." A thirteen-year-old boy could only take so much affection from an elderly aunt. The holidays were great but they both needed this chance to get away from their families and walk off all the food and sweets they'd been gorging themselves on the past few days. Mike and Paul were the best of friends, understanding each other without having to talk about it a lot. So when Paul called Mike that morning and suggested they just head out for a few hours, Mike readily agreed. He also needed a break. His younger sister was driving him crazy in the house.

After the terrible weather that had kept everyone a virtual prisoner at home, today's sunshine seemed like a belated Christmas present. The rain and slush had been replaced with a good dumping of clean fresh snow and the temperature had finally gone down to a more normal level for that time of year. The birds were clustered around the feeder, scattering seeds all over the deck and Mike's mom had already chased the squirrel away with her broom. It finally felt like winter and the boys loved it.

The trees were covered and cloaked in snow, the bar branches outlined in white and the evergreens sloped down under mounds of white. The lake behind Mike's house stretched flat and vast, the far shore rising cold and still under the brilliant sunshine. Purple blue shadows hung along the lake's edge. Conversation wasn't necessary as the two of them walked through the snow, dragging their feet to make channels were they went. They saw where a deer had crossed the road, probably headed for the cedars that lined the creek running into the lake. The creek hadn't frozen, its waters gurgling under humped snow and ice that hung suspended over it. It had the sound of spring, for usually the creek would have died to a frozen trickle long before now.

They decided to head out across the lake to the point. Once there they would be able to look right down the lake. Its huge expanse always gave them a funny feeling in their stomachs. It was one of the things that made them good friends, similar feelings about so many things. Mike just had to nod his head toward the point and Paul knew what he was thinking. It wasn't very far and they'd still make it home in time for turkey.

They were the first to touch this snow. No tracks, of animal, man or machine had yet ventured onto the perfect lake. In fact, only two days ago Mike's father had wondered aloud if the lake would ever freeze that year. But now it was wonderfully smooth and white.

"Do you think the ice is thick enough?" asked Paul. "This is the first cold day we've had. It doesn't look like anyone else has tried it yet."

"Sure, it should be fine," Mike assured him. "Last night was really cold. Besides, what's wrong with being the first? I think it's neat."

"Yea, I guess you're right," said Paul. "I"

Agreement worked out for cross-country trails

Haliburton County's Nordic Trails Association has taken over the operation and maintenance of cross country ski trails at the Leslie Frost Natural Resources Centre south of Dorset.

Under an agreement signed December 21, the association, an organization of local tourist operators and business people interested in promoting and improving Nordic skiing opportunities in the county, will assume responsibility for the trails.

The 22.1 kilometre looped trail system at the Frost Centre has been a popular destination for skiers in the northern part of the county, as well as for those in search of variety and challenge.

Nordic Trails Association president Gary Baumgartner said there are two reasons for the group's interest in the Frost Centre trails.

"Firstly, the trails are designed for a more back country type of skiing than the rest of our present system. Most trails are single track-set with limited ski-skating opportunities.

"Secondly, we wanted to expand our Nordic Trail system to better serve skiers in the northern part of the Haliburton Highlands. Our goal is to provide better skiing opportunities for local Dorset area resorts, and eventually include them in our lodge to lodge ski programme."

Trail use fees at the Frost Centre will be the same as those in effect throughout the Nordic Trails Association system. One day passes are $6, two day passes $10, children $1 and students $3. Season passes for the entire Nordic Trails network are $50 for students, $80 for individuals and $120 for families.

Trail passes can be purchased at the Frost Centre, the Chamber of Commerce office in Minden, the Sport Stop in Haliburton, and at most area inns and motels.

People heading out to try the Frost Centre Trails should take note that there is no ski patrol on the system. Ski shelters are located on longer trails and equipped with wood stoves, firewood and outdoor toilets.

SHARPEN THOSE BLADES! Haliburton's outdoor skating rink is taking shape, thanks to Art Ouellette, who donates his time and equipment so people can enjoy the fun and exercise of taking a few turns around the rink, which is created on the tennis courts at Rotary Beach. There's no charge for using the rink.

Medallists sign up for derby

Spectators at the seventh annual Minden Technical Challenge will once again see the world's best mushers competing in the world's largest limited-class speed race for sled-dogs. Five medallists have already signed up for the race which takes place on January 12th and 13th in Minden.

They will be vying for a purse of $25,100 — the largest in Canada — provided by race sponsor Martin Pet Foods of Elmira, Ontario. The winning mushers will also be eligible for maximum points in the contest for world medal ranking awarded at the end of each season by the International Sled Dog Racing Association (ISDRA).

Race Governor Val Lougheed reports that the following 1990 ISDRA medallists have already registered. They include: Val Beland, Minnesota; Terri Killam, Mass.; Dorothy Arthurs, Idaho; Stuart Osthoff, Minn.; Michele Osthoff, Minn.

Top Canadian racers from one end of the country to the other are also coming. Terry Streep of Fort Nelson, B.C., who placed second in the Unlimited Class at the Canadian Open Sled Dog Races on December 15th and 16th is coming, as are Paul-Emile and Wilson Levesque, two brothers from Kamouraska, Quebec, who have placed extremely well at Minden in recent years.

The Main Street start and finish ensures that spectators have a ring-side view of the exciting action provided by these outstanding athletes, both human and canine. Racing starts each day at 10 a.m. The delightful kid-and-mutt race will be held on Saturday after the official heats are concluded. As always, everyone is invited to visit the "pit" area throughout the weekend to talk with the mushers and look over the dogs and puppies.

There will also be demonstrations of kick-sledding on Main Street between the eight- and four-dog heats, and spectators will have a chance to try this growing sport for themselves. "Catch The Drift", a song written and recorded by local musicians, will be the theme song for the entire weekend and "Drifter", the race mascot, will be on hand to greet visitors as well.

Outnumbered Tykes pull off a 9-2 victory

On Sunday, Dec. 16, the Haliburton Minor Tykes travelled to Little Britain to play their second game of the season. Haliburton was out numbered on the bench, having only eight players while Little Britain iced fifteen.

Jamie Salas provided solid goaltending leaving Little Britain shaking their heads. He allowed only two goals.

Jeff Wilson was the big scoring machine with six goals, while Jason Chambers, Matthew Gerry and Matthew Marlin also scored one each.

Cory Sisson, Jeff Packard and Ryan Goldenburg played a strong defensive game, each getting at least two assists.

Final score was 9-2 for Haliburton.

Boys find they're really walking on thin ice always like to be first at everything." The two boys chuckled, feeling they had the world to themselves that afternoon. It was a good feeling.

They took turns walking ahead of each other, breaking trail through the light snow. It ploughed halfway up their boots, dry as feathers. Mike was just ahead of Paul when it happened.

Suddenly the air was shattered by a loud crunch and Mike disappeared from sight. The ice had given way, plunging the boy into the frigid waters. Almost by instinct, for it happened so fast, Paul was flat on his stomach. The black water was less than a foot ahead of him. In a second Mike's head popped up, terror in his eyes. "Help me Paul, help me. It's so cold." Paul felt a terrible hand grip his insides and twist.

Mike was floundering, trying to swim. But his boots were like anchors, dragging down, so that all he could do was flail about like a wounded animal. "I don't want to die! Help me Paul," he repeated, panic rising in his voice.

"Take it easy Mike. I'll get you out." Paul spread himself out, legs wide apart. He reached out his arm as Mike tried to grab onto the ice. The water had set the snow around the hole, making it slippery. They both knew now how thin it really was. Would it even support Paul for much longer, let alone both of them? This flashed through Paul's mind for a split second and that was all. The only thing that mattered was getting his friend out. "Grab my hand, Mike. But be careful. Try not to bang the ice." Mike reached up and as he did so, half his face went back into the frigid water. Paul moved his hand to within Mike's grasp and prayed he could hold it. He did.

"I'm going to pull you out, but I'll have to be careful Mike. We don't want any more ice to break through. I'll crawl backwards. Do whatever you can to help but don't kick too hard." For what seemed an eternity, a drama of life and death was played out around that hole in the lake. Neither boy was exceptionally strong and Mike's clothing was heavy with the icy water. Inch by painful inch, their hands locked like destiny itself, the two bodies moved, Paul squirming backwards like a flattened insect, Mike pulling forward painfully slowly. Their breaths came in gulping gasps and grunts, as miraculously, Mike emerged from the lake. Paul kept pulling him backward and Mike now crawled and squirmed on his own stomach. They wanted to get as far away from that hole as they could before trying to stand up. Finally, Mike could stand it no longer. "Paul, I've got to get home. I'm freezing."

His lips were purple and the rest of his face beet-red. He was shaking uncontrollably, shuddering and trembling head to toe. Paul said they should walk far apart until they reached shore. Mike again was ahead but to the side and Paul watched his shaking body. Ice had started to form in lacy crystals on the back of his jacket. They made it to shore. Then they started to run, Paul holding himself back so he'd keep pace with his slower, weighed down friend.

When they got to Mike's house, his mother took one look at her son and started pulling off the half-frozen clothing. Then she wrapped him in the comforter off her bed, sat him beside the woodstove and started rubbing him through the blanket. Only later did she take a minute to thank Paul for what he had done.

Mike was fine. He never even developed a cold. And the leftover turkey supper was the best meal he had ever had in his young life. He had three helpings. Even his sister didn't bother him. He was just glad to be alive.

Atoms take B-Division title in tournament

Haliburton's O.M.H.A. Atoms hosted a tournament on December 8 and came away with the B-Division Trophy.

In the first game against Orillia the Haliburton squad jumped into a three goal lead, midway thru the second period. Greg Schell scored once in the first with an assist from Joshua Dennis. Josh Burk then scored unassisted and Ian Clement put one in with help from Greg Schell. Orillia then came back to score twice in the second to cut the Huskie lead to one. Early in the third Matthew Burk scored to once again put Haliburton ahead by two. The Haliburton squad seemed to relax after that which was a big mistake as Orillia came on strong and scored three unanswered goals to give them a 5-4 victory.

After their first game loss to Orillia the Haliburton team knew they had to buckle down. They came up with a big win against Woodville. Matthew Billings scored in the first from Josh Burk. Greg Schell scored from Ian Clement and Billy Dovell added an unassisted goal in the second. Woodville played well in the third while Haliburton kept the pressure on but could not add to their score. Blaze Foster came up big when called upon to record another shutout.

The B-Championship game was played against Gravenhurst and the local boys came up with another big game. Josh Burk scored in the first from brother Matthew. Gravenhurst came back early in the second to tie the game but less than a minute later Josh Burk added his second goal on an unassisted effort. Greg Schell then struck for another Haliburton goal when he tipped in a Josh Burk shot. Gravenhurst scored again to keep them in the game but Josh Burk came back with another unassisted effort to give him another hat trick. The second period ended with Haliburton ahead 4-2.

The third period was another action packed battle with both teams having their chances. Blaze Foster was once again sharp as he allowed Gravenhurst only one goal. Greg Schell scored his second goal of the game with assists from Andrew Madill and Joshua Dennis. Billy Dovell finished off the Haliburton scoring with an unassisted effort. This win gave Haliburton the B-Championship and a nice trophy for each of the players. Players of the game trophies were presented to Josh Burk for the first game, Blaze Foster for his shutout in the second and Matthew Burk in the third. Beaverton went on to win the A-Division trophy in the final game against Orillia. The tournament was enjoyed by all the teams that attended and was a successful, well run affair.

pion waste manager at the Haliburton dump, has agreed (with volunteer help) to set aside an area for mulch (wet garbage). Just thin, if we could get every innkeeper to send his set garbage to Sam, we'd have enough wonderful, organic mulch to fertilize the flowers and vegetables of everyone in the Highlands.

Then, if we could get a portable cardboard compactor and a dry storage area, all those millions of boxes could be sent back for reuse. The bottles and cans are easy. The dump would last years longer than expected, and our tax dollars could be better spent on important things like education. How about it? Have you got the guts to try? Call me. 754-2181.

County's waste plan moves slowly underway

by LEN MUNT
County Co-ordinator

The County of Haliburton Waste Management Master Plan Study is underway and in its early stages. The study, which will assess and reorganize the current municipal waste management system into a technically and economically appropriate system, is presently in the first of three stages.

The main emphasis of this stage is the collection of data pertinent to the study. Some of this data, such as population and waste generation characteristics, existing waste management practices and the identification of feasible waste management options is to be assessed. This information will be utilized in the assessment of the need for new waste management facilities in the area.

Other data such as social, cultural and geophysical factors will be used in later stages which will help in siting new landfills if necessary. There include geological mapping, land use, community, heritage and archaeological resources, utility corridors and natural environment considerations.

Alternative waste management technologies will be summarized and assessed as to their suitability for Haliburton County. Criteria will be developed for both waste management systems selection and identification of Candidate Areas for landfill sites. These criteria will be formalized with input from the general public through the Public Liaison Committee.

A Public Liaison committee (PLC) is being established to aid the transfer of information between the general public, the steering committee and the consultants. The PLC will reach the public through newsletters, mailouts, direct contact and presentations. Through the PLC, the public will contribute to the study and input directly into the development of criteria for landfill site and waste management system selection.

A further study activity is the development of a County recycling program. Alternatives for recycling programs have been identified and will be assessed in the near future for their feasibility in Haliburton County.

Throughout the rest of the study, a preferred waste management system will be selected in addition to identifying candidate markets for recycling and energy from waste. The need for waste management facilities will then be identified. A site or sites will be selected through the study process by the development and application of environmental evaluation criteria. The study will result in a submission to the Environmental Assessment Board for approval.

An Open House for the study was held on Saturday, September 22, 1990 in Minden, Haliburton and Wilberforce. Representatives from the Steering Committee, the Ministry of the Environment and the consultants, A.J. Robinson & Associates Inc., were present to introduce the Master Plan Study and its work program and to obtain general comments from the public concerning the study process and waste management in general.

The next Steering Committee meeting will be held on Thursday, January 10, 1991 at 7:00 p.m. in the County Council Chambers. This meeting is open to the public and all those who are interested are urged to attend. If you have any questions, please contact LEN MUNT, the Haliburton County waste management coordinator, at 286-1333. Remember... cottagers are a part of the process as well! We need input from all those involved at all stages of the study. Watch for the first newsletter coming out in 1991!

and side trips to add new lighthouses to my collection of photos from the other coast slowed us right down, and the 'day or two' turned out to be ten.

An impending cold front chased us down into the Redwood country of Northern California, where we were able to join 40 or 50 other motorhomes and camp directly on the ocean shore, where it was milder than it was inland... but still cool. We visited some soul-stirring redwood groves, but found they didn't seem to have quite the same impact on us — perhaps because we had been through the area some years ago.

We decided to slip inland and head for the northern shores of San Francisco Bay, and aside from another look at the magnificent Redwoods in the Avenue of the Giants, we were there in short order. There was some very scenic wine country, but since neither of us drink wine, we had no real reason to stop.

I did stop a few times, because the area also includes some mountains that appear much larger in real life than they do on the relief map. There are some whopping highway grades, and the long, slow ones made a scary 'check engine soon' warning light up on my dashboard.

Working holidays 'go with the territory' for road crews

Eve, Christmas Day and Boxing Day. "It goes with the territory."

However, to be able to spend time with their families, some of the men went out at one o'clock Christmas morning so they could finish their route and be home by five — just the time young children seem to wake up at on Christmas.

Mulholland says the men probably wouldn't say it out loud, but they feel good about making it possible for others to be with their families on Christmas.

"The reason why they're out is so people can travel," Mulholland says.

The Ministry of Transportation

crews worked round the clock. "I just sent my wife a post-dated cheque and said 'Enjoy it,'" laughs Gord Paisley. His shift started Christmas morning and didn't end until nine that night. Then it was back to work at five on Boxing Day morning for another long shift.

"How was Christmas for you?" Paisley asks.

"It makes for a long day," he adds. But then, referring to comments that people who work for the government have life easy, he jokes "Oh well, don't you know it's a privilege to work for the ministry?"

Hospitals Care About Your Vital Signs.

Shouldn't You Care About Theirs?

Nobody likes to ask for money. But the fact is, without your support, it's becoming increasingly difficult for hospitals to upgrade their equipment, services and innovative programs. And, sadly, that means that some much-needed medical care may never reach the people who need it most. So do your part, and take care of your hospital. After all, they do the same for you.

Give To Your Local Hospital. Give To Life.

THE HALIBURTON COUNTY ECHO

Wednesday, January 2, 1991

SECTION 2

A LOOK BACK AT 1990 AS SEEN IN THE ECHO

County. Councillors and staff from each of the 10 municipalities met with representatives of the Ministry of Municipal Affairs.

February

English was the hottest topic when in a narrow vote of eight to six, county council decided Haliburton's official language was English. This vote was Snowdon Reeve George Simmons's response to the furor over the French Services Act (Bill 8) which was passed in 1988. The county joined Sault Ste. Marie, Thunder Bay and others in declaring themselves English only.

Big and Little Hawk Lake dwellers made a request to county council requesting a seven-foot drawdown limit on their lakes.

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

TIME WILL ALWAYS move forward and the rest of us right along with it. As New Year's Eve draws closer, we find ourselves looking back over the events of the last year, perhaps hoping it will somehow prepare us to face the challenges we'll meet in the new year.

Each year will always be remembered for certain reasons and 1990 is no exception. Not only will it be remembered as the start of a new decade, it will always be synonymous with the initials GST.

In recent memory no government policy has raised such a furor in Canada as the Goods and Services Taxes and the results of its implementation will likely be felt throughout Haliburton County in the next few months.

The county itself is already feeling a pinch over the recession which has magnified itself in the last few months, playing havoc with the tourist trade.

Other issues which affected the county include the seemingly never-ending struggle of the G.W. Martin Lumber mill in Harcourt and the May flood in Haliburton.

But the biggest issue which will undoubtedly carry over into the new year has got to be the institution of a county wide Official Plan.

For a look back at some of the events of 1990, please read on:

January

If you had to pick one item from the start of this year it would have to be the weather. Managing to survive the coldest December since 1980, with temperatures averaging -16 Celsius, January gave county residents some warmer weather. In fact on January 17th, the temperature rose to a near record of 7.5 Celsius. This was accompanied by over 26 mm of rain — "pretty substantial for January," said local weather watcher Jim Elstone at the time.

But once the temperature dropped, the roads turned into skating rinks and tow trucks became a common sight.

Plans for the development of Lutterworth's industrial park hit a snag when the township needed to have a survey done of the proposed site. By the end of the month the problem was solved and it was expected the site could be ready for the spring.

On January 25th, a large part of the county was left in the dark at least an hour as work crews frantically tried to find the problem.

In Minden, council approved plans to build a bowling alley on the village's main street.

In local politics, Murray Fearrey, Dysart reeve for 14 years, resigned. He felt "the municipality is completely bogged down with bureaucracies and delays and stalls." But his chair was not left open for long and Deputy-reeve Bill Davis was named as reeve.

Mush was the most popular word in Minden as Minden's Sled Dog Derby was held. The event attracted competitors from all over North America.

Also in Minden, the OPP instituted their new 1-800- number which attached that division with the dispatcher in Peterborough. The Minden OPP also welcomed their new detachment commander, Sgt. Bill Elliott.

The end of January saw the start of talks trying to come up with an official plan for Haliburton off from their jobs may be back in business. The new owner, Robert Bury and Co. (Canada) Ltd. was expected to take possession on April 10th.

The way it was... 1990

Dysart council turned down a proposal which would see the construction of a 30-unit luxury town-home chalets near Sir Sam's Ski Area. The project did not fit into the zoning rules.

The weather was in the news again as several temperature records were broken during the week of March break. On March 14th and 15th, the temperature was hovering around the 18 to 20 Celsius mark. The latter temperature broke a record of 14 Celsius which occurred in 1898.

County council decided to hire a county planner to help form the county's official plan.

The council also announced a 13 per cent hike in its budget.

On a bright note, Anson, Hindon and Minden announced the Olympics could come to Minden in the form of white water slalom races to be held at the Minden Wild Preserve. This would of course occur only if Toronto got the nod to host the games.

Sparks flew when Anson, Hindon and Minden decided to adopt two restrictions to curb development in their areas. At least 155 people signed a petition protesting the new bylaws.

Rumors abound that long-time MP Bill Scott would retire in the summer after 25 years of service. He rejects these rumors. "There may be rumors but not from Bill Scott."

May

Water is the big story of this month or what to do with it. On May 23rd a broken beaver dam sent torrents of muddy, rushing water flowing into Haliburton. Damage was expected to exceed one million dollars and it would take several months until a report would be made on what exactly caused the flood.

Also this month, the MNR decided not to transfer Martin Lumber's timber rights to its possible new owners. Minister Lyn McLeod said the decision was to prevent the quality and quantity of area timber from diminishing.

A possible tornado was reported by Bill Park, owner of Kushog Lake Marine, but weather forecasters with the Ontario Weather Centre would not confirm one touched down. However, the

Rushing flood water paralyzes Haliburton

WHERE IT ALL BEGAN: The stream flowing out of Moss's pond was controlled by a 15 foot high earth and rock barrier, built by Dysart several years ago as a flood protection measure. The water was almost at the crest when municipal employees cleared the 36 inch culvert, at left. When the beaver dam above the barrier let go early Wednesday afternoon, the force of the water swept the barrier away.

April

The accommodation problem in area schools was given a boost when Minister of Education Sean Conway toured some local schools. Included on the tour was a visit to the old IGA building in Minden and a trip down the fire escape of the Victoria Street Public School in Haliburton.

A local landowner and contractor were charged by the Ministry of Natural Resources for allowing silt-filled water from a construction site to flow into the Gull River.

The sale of Martin's Lumber in Harcourt was stalled on the question of whether or not the Ministry of Natural Resources will transfer the mill's timber licenses to the new owner. Sean Conway denies he is exercising any influence over the MNR to have the timber licenses transferred over to the Murray Brothers and McCrea Lumber in his riding. Conway is related to the Murray family.

The Haliburton Board of Education agrees to sell the Lakeview School (known as the Norm Sisco Centre) to Sir Sandford Fleming College. The price tag is $390,000.

The Ministry of the Environment says Dysart can go ahead and extend the sewer line. The Lake Kashagawigamog Organization is concerned over what this will do to the quality of the lake.

damage to Park's marine was estimated to be caused by winds up to 110 km per hour.

The board of education passes its budget with a 16 per cent increase. Provincial cutbacks are blamed.

The Ministry of Education denies the board's request for a capital funding grant to build two additions to alleviate the county's accommodation problem. The board had submitted a proposal last fall asking for over five million dollars to build the additions, one on to the Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden, the other onto the J.D. Hogson Elementary School in Haliburton.

Gypsy moths and the effect they have on tree mortality was very much in the news as Dysart Reeve Bill Davis accuses the MNR of not understanding the extent of the problem. The MNR had accepted an assessment from Gordon Howse who said there is no scientific evidence linking the Gypsy moth with tree mortality. The county is to be sprayed for the moth after May 20th.

June

The MNR still refuses to allow Martin Lumber's timber rights to be given to a potential purchaser, Robert Bury and Company. Its reasons are still unclear and Minister Lyn McLeod hints the crown land could be cut by the end of the year.

COMMUNITY NEWS

But this will depend on the results of a study. Local business people are fuming while they wait for the results of an engineer's report to see what exactly caused the May flood. Later on in the month the first estimates of road damage comes in at $125,000.

A Haliburton County Home Support Service meeting erupts into anger when 20 members are refused the right to vote. At an annual meeting, the board of directors decide to change the policy on who is allowed to vote.

Contaminated dirt from an old Esso storage site is moved from the OPP office near Drag Lake to the Dysart et al landfill site on Highway 121.

Earthfest is held in Haliburton sponsored by the County of Haliburton's Advocates for a Naturally Good Environment (CHANGE). The event is a big success as people spend a sunny Saturday learning about the beauty of our environment.

Anson, Hindon and Minden's 14.5 per cent budget increase is mostly attributed to the $340,000 worth of repairs which have to be done to the arena.

Local MPP John Eakins announces he is retiring from Queen's Park after 15 years. A week later, the Liberal party announces two candidates will be running for the vacant post, former Lindsay Mayor Jim Flynn and Victoria County Councillor Pat O'Reilly. Also mentioned in the news was an announcement that a local Anglican minister named Dennis Drainville would be seeking the New Democratic Party nomination in the upcoming fall election.

July

Two local politicians, Dysart et al councillor Murray Fearrey and Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis, accuse the Haliburton County Steering Committee on Long-term Health Reform on misleading the public about the 18 bed chronic care unit. At a meeting later in the month, a visiting NDP leader Bob Rae, lambastes the Liberals for reneging on the chronic care unit promised to Haliburton. Rae was in town to attend a meeting in which saw Dennis Drainville acclaimed as the Victoria/Haliburton NDP candidate.

Virtually all the members of the Stanhope Airport Committee resign after the municipality hires airport manager, Michael Carey. "The manager can't be told by seven or eight people what he should do. He's hired to manage the airport," said Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis.

Canada Post announces the Norland Post Office will be shut down. Local residents are not pleased.

The G.W. Martin Lumber mill in Harcourt is finally sold, but President Norman Laine does not want to reveal who the buyer is. The new owner buys 70 per cent of the mill, including most of the equipment.

The Haliburton Board of Education releases a list of which schools take priority in order to find a solution to the accommodation crisis. Before any funding can be given, the Ministry of Education wanted the board to make this list. The board decides to sell the Victoria Street School site in Haliburton as soon as space is provided for the children in an addition built on to the J.D. Hodgson Elementary School. A new addition will also be built on to the Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden to accommodate the primary students who must attend school in the old IGA building. The Haliburton Home and School Association is not pleased with the board's decision.

County administrators believe local taxes will be increased once the government's proposed Goods and Services Tax comes into being.

Some local real estate brokers deny rumors the Haliburton real estate market is in a slump.

Lake Kashawigamog resort owners are angry they will not be allowed to expand their facilities to generate their portion of costs for the sewer line extension. The Ministry of the Environment seems to change the game rules at the last minute. Resort owners must decide whether or not they can now afford the $7-million project.

The new owners of G.W. Martin's announce they aren't exactly sure what type of business they will be running and once again it will depend on whether MNR's Lyn McLeod allows them to purchase the mill's crown timber licenses. The new owners are Frank Yantha of Killaloe and Don Foley of Kingston.

The future of the proposed sewer line extension is doubtful as several major resort backers pull out of the project.

A meeting between Norland residents and Canada Post officials leads to frustrations as residents' questions go unanswered. Canada Post decides it will close the Norland's Post Office in October and allow retail postal offices to handle selling stamps.

The annual Bluegrass festival is held in Haliburton's Glebe Park. The event is a big success, but excessive drinking and rowdiness have some people demanding tighter security for next year.

An all candidates meeting and debate is held in Haliburton at the Dysart Community Centre. The six were — Brad Medd, Family Coalition; Pat O'Reilly, Liberal; Dennis Drainville, New Democrats; Hugh Boyd, Independent; Ron Jenkins, Progressive Conservative; and Ron Hawkrigg, Libertarian. The debate gave both the press and public the chance to meet their candidates face to face.

Also hitting the campaign trail was Provincial PC leader Mike Harris. He visited Lindsay near the end of the month to lend his support to Jenkins.

The Haliburton Board of Education decides not to close down the Gooderham Public School due to decreasing enrollment. The public came out in force to show their support for the school and board decided to reconsider the closing.

The county begins to advertise for volunteers to form a liaison committee for the county's new Waste Management Master Plan.

The Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden holds a 50th anniversary reunion, giving former classmates from years past the chance to catch up.

A waitress at the PineStone Inn receives third degree burns in a kitchen accident. "I'm healing incredibly well," said 27-year-old Darla Searle from her hospital bed at Toronto's Wellesly Hospital.

The area's newest MPP, Dennis Drainville, promises Haliburton County will definitely get its chronic care beds now that the NDP is in power at Queen's Park.

A young Haliburton girl, Amber White, is rescued from a gaping hole which opened up in her family's backyard. The hole is believed to be part of an old rotted septic tank or cesspool.

The Haliburton County Board of Education ponders the safety of students who stand off board property at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School to smoke. Beginning this month, the board institutes the last phase of its smoking policy which prohibits smoking on school property. School bus drivers complain the students are standing too close to the road.

Ambulance crews in Haliburton County are hopeful a contract can be worked out preventing a possible strike from occurring.

Long standing MP Bill Scott is honored at a dinner held in Lindsay. Scott has been serving the area for 25 years.

November

A bad ice storm on November the 5th wreaks havoc on the roads and knocks power out at several spots throughout the county.

If ambulance crews go on strike no one will suffer, assures Minden Reeve Ray Moore and Ian Douglas, shop steward for the ambulance drivers.

Both Minden and Dysart reject County Planner Mark Stagg's suggestion of hiring a junior planner to do minor jobs for the municipalities. "It sounds like another bureaucracy-building program," said Dysart Councillor John Parish.

Part of the report on what caused May's big flood finally arrives. Dysart et al's embankment near Moss's Pond is highlighted. Dysart council meets with the municipality's insurance company to discuss what action should be taken.

Dysart Reeve Bill Davis is admonished by other councillors for secretly tape recording a committee meeting.

Minden council rejects the idea to hold Ride For Sight, a move which pleases and angers people, and a local couple who own a trailer park in Snowdon decide to bid for it themselves. "The Ride is such a good cause, we shouldn't have lost it," said Bev Vivian of South Lake Trailer Park. Canada Post cuts staffing on Saturdays and mail

December

The board of education makes two big decisions this past month. First, they rescind part of their smoking policy and agree to recreate a new smoking area for HHSS students on campus. Second, they reject a request of Sir Sandford Fleming College for an extra week of summer classes. Later, Director Stuart Baker announces his July 1991 retirement.

The county's impact study on full market property assessment comes in, and residential taxes will rise in the new system.

Lutterworth Reeve Carol Puffer becomes the new County Warden after Donald Shortreed's year in the position comes to a close.

Milestone birthdays celebrated at party

SENIOR LEAGUE

by: WINNIFRED BARNUM

Happy Holiday season to all my readers.

The ladies from Our Lady of Fatima Catholic Church brought our Thursday Tea Party. They were accompanied by Father Felix who played and sang Christmas carols during our tea party. This was lovely. Since this was the Birthday Tea the ladies brought a beautiful birthday cake for the residents who had birthdays in Dec. They were Annie Schultz, Gertie McKay, Reg Booth, and Lillian Curry who was 102 years old Dec. 10/90. The lunch was delicious and we thank you all immensely.

That evening Marg Prentice called bingo for us, and gave each of us a desk calendar. We surely thank her; she looks as though she enjoys bingo with us.

Mr. & Mrs. George Brown were here to see Pearl Lyle Fri.

Friday we had a beautiful luncheon from the Management of Hyland Crest Senior Citizens' Home, for which the residents thank them very much. The luncheon was prepared by Lynn Shirley Dietary Supervisor, Doris Robertson—Activities Supervisor and helped by the kitchen staff. A staff member waited on the residents beside him. It was a delicious luncheon. During the meal four draws were made for a turkey: The first draw was ticket seller, Alice Todd—winner Diana Morris; second seller, Alice Rivers—winner Neva Hobden; third seller, Marie McPhail—winner Janet Horsley; fourth seller, Mary McKelvey—winner Ruby Graham. Two members of the management were present, Gary McKnight, County Administrator and Rheta Jones Administrator of Hyland Crest. We were happy to have them present. Ursula Nietsch played the accordion, and sang carols before lunch and after lunch we adjourned to the main lounge for a sing-song. We thank Ursula very much for entertaining us. The residents do appreciate it.

Last week Bernice Lydiatt, R.R.1 Minden presented us with a beautiful gingerbread house decorated with jelly beans. We thank her from the bottom of our hearts.

The Residents thank the people who gave flowers, candy and fruit. We really appreciate your kindness.

Christmas morning we had our breakfast and were in the main lounge by nine o'clock. It was not long till we heard HO-HO-HO, and Santa and his elves appeared. After greeting us all they went quickly to work. It seemed no time till every one had received a lovely gift, and Lynn Shirley set out crackers, cheese and a delightful assortment of fruit, for a snack. Many of the residents families came to take them out for the rest of the day. Those who remained here had a delicious Christmas dinner. Some had relatives come to have dinner with them. Everyone had a enjoyable Christmas.

Our sympathy is extended to the relatives and friends of Ada Turrall who passed away Dec. 26/1990 in her 88th year.

Deer pays a surprise visit

DORSET NEWS

by: PHYLLIS BRISCOE

Some New Year's birthdays coming up: Norman MacKay was a New Years baby in 1904 and is still going strong. We wish him many happy returns. Larry Bradbury will be 5 years old on the 1st. Our local Postmaster, John Clayton celebrates on Jan. 2nd; his nephew, Carlo Bevilacqua, also has a birthday on the 2nd, his 8th. Best wishes and congratulations to them all.

There were many Christmas parties during the past week. One was that held at the Dorset Daycare Centre at Paint Lake, which was well attended by the children, staff, parents and grand parents. After entertainment for the children, a sumptuous meal was enjoyed by all. And of course, the man with the red suit and white beard was on hand to pass out gifts to the children, who appear to have an inexhaustible supply of energy, which will surely run down after the main event.

The lucky winners for the Lion's $100.-a-month draw were for October, Terry Mulligan; for November, Helen Crosson; and for December, Steve Woolman. Congratulations to each and all.

The Sherborne Branch of the Haliburton Library, known as the Dorset Library, have several thank you's they wish to express: To all who came out to see the Puppet Theatre, and to the Dorset Lions Club for their generous donation to the fund for a computer and the Robinson's Store for supplying treats for the children.

You have heard a lot of fish stories but I have a deer story for you. A lady who lives at Paint Lake had been in Toronto for a few weeks and her home was empty. She was returning, so her daughter, who lives across the road, went over to turn the heat up. On her arrival, she spied a large deer in her Mother's garden, digging away. Upon seeing a human presence, the animal quickly scampered off into the woods. There were parsnips in the garden, as well as cabbage roots and that was what the big buck was digging for. But he left his calling card. A four point antler (just one) had been dropped during his foraging. The antler is now decorated and now reposes on the lady's table.

H.H. If you have a grease spot on jeans or jacket try using a nail brush and liquid soap and brush several times.

Up, up and away... Before heading out to the ski slopes, Mike Lyons decided to practise his jumps on a mound of snow on Victoria Street. This way there were a lot fewer people to bump into!

it's neat to Pitch-In!
